SUBJECT INDEX

The attention of the user of this subject index is directed to the following features:

1) The index is arranged alphabetically. However, modifying prepositions such as "by, in, of, for, from, on, with..." are disregarded. Similarly, numbers and modifying symbols such as α, m, tert, N-... are disregarded in chemical terms. Number and letter symbols, as in abbreviations and trade names, precede the first fully spelled word.

2) Primary attention has been given to the various materials, products and equipment subject to deterioration and to the various means of preservation. Phenomena of deterioration such as 'Corrosion' and deteriorative agents such as 'Fungi' are indexed extensively only where they have been the main object of the abstracted study or discussion. When searching of the index, the most specific heading should be looked up first. General headings such as 'Metals' or 'Textiles' are used only when information on more than one specific metal or textile is given. Alloys are indexed under their most abundant metal component.

3) Chemical compounds are indexed according to Chemical Abstracts policies. Specific compounds are also indexed under the most commonly used form of their systematic name.

4) Terms such as 'fungicidal' or waterproof' are used to denote any degree of fungitoxicity or water repellency, respectively.

Acetamide chloro-, or (hydroxymethyl) chloro-,+ formaldehyde, rotproofing of cotton Text 40, PDL-38765
